I grew up rich. I wouldn't say I'm poor but I don't live near as well as my parents.

I grew up in a house which zillow has now valued at 5 million dollars in a very wealthy area. My mom never worked. My dad had an office and employees and besides my mom, three ex-wives. My grandmother and great grandfather came from extreme wealth.

And really, it just turned out that my dad, though he was pretending for years to run a business, have an office and be a big important person, never actually made any money. All of it was drawn from a trust that had been set aside for him, and finally when it went dry, it was over.

When my parents passed I inherited about $13,000. Meh, that's life. I have two siblings that roam the earth thinking there's still something they can capitalize on from all this ...some privilege bank of connections they can make withdrawals from. But I've accepted that I'm just ordinary folk. Life doesn't owe me anything.
